Residential speed limit of 40 km/h has 'merit': Logan

Province needed. Transportation boss says data supports lower limits, but impractical for city to do on its own

ROBSON FLETCHER
robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Reducing the standard speed limit in residential areas to 40 km/h is an idea that has "merit" and would almost certainly save lives, the city's transportation chief said Monday, but it would be "cumbersome" for Calgary to do without provincial legislation.

Citing "very, very clear" data on pedestrian fatalities, transportation general manager Mac Logan told council it's hard to argue with the numbers.

"The faster that the vehicle's going that hits the pedestrian, the more likely they are to be seriously injured or killed," Logan said.

His comments came as council voted unanimously to ask the province to boost fines for speeding in residential areas, and Coun. Ray Jones inquired why the city doesn't simply reduce speed limits, itself.

"We do have the option to do it," Logan said. "But we have to sign it appropriately. So because the default limit is 50 km/h, we would basically have to sign every street that it's 40 km/h, as an exception."

That would be cost prohibitive and impractical, he added.

Prior to 2010, Logan noted, a previous city council requested that the Alberta government reduce the default speed limit to 40 km/h, "but that was rejected by the province."

Coun. Richard Pootmans said there have already been four pedestrians killed this year in Calgary and another 162 struck non-fatally, and speed makes all the difference between life and death.

"If you're driving at 30 km/h, there is a five per cent likelihood of a pedestrian fatality," he said, citing data from the World Health Organization. "If you're driving at 48 km/h, there's a 45 per cent likelihood of a pedestrian fatality."

Calgary saw an average of 508 pedestrians struck each year from 2007 to 2011, according to police data.

Nine pedestrians were killed on city streets in 2013, while 11 died in 2012 and six in 2011.

The city could reduce speed limits in all residential areas to 40 km/h, but it would have to erect signs like this one on every single street, according to transportation general manager Mac Logan. The more practical way, he said, would be for the province to reduce the default limit through legislation.

$5-billion project

Council votes for report on impact of ring road

The dream of a completed ring road around Calgary has been decades in the making, but now that the reality is finally upon the city, members of council want a clearer account of what it will cost and how it will impact residents.

Council voted Monday to have city staff prepare a report before the end of the year on the effects of the $5-billion project.

Construction of interchanges and other routes connecting to the ring road's southwest leg are already projected to cost Calgary $133 million, according to a city report.

Mayor Naheed Nenshi said he was struck by how much of the "really expensive" infrastructure projects the city has already undertaken relate to the existing northwest portion of the ring road.

"We've said in our council priorities that we want to focus on choke points in the existing network, but all the money is being sucked up by interchanges for brand new growth," the mayor said.

Coun. Richard Pootmans said changes in traffic patterns also need to be considered.

"On the west side of the city the ring road is particularly close to the downtown," he said. "We know that there are going to be people both northbound and southbound that will look to be traversing through our communities — our established communities — as a shortcut to the downtown."

Standing his ground

"The province needs to fish or cut bait on this. They've got to figure out how to legislate it and move forward, or, if they choose not to legislate it, just throw it away. And then the City of Calgary will use our own mechanisms — particularly around water servicing — to help manage growth in the city and in the region." Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi

Regional planning. Calgary Metropolitan Plan pointless if it isn't used region-wide: Mayor

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

If what both Mayor Naheed Nenshi and a spokesperson for the Alberta government said Monday is to be taken literally, then the Calgary Metropolitan Plan appears dead in the water.

The mayor said he won't sign off on the CMP if the province won't make the regional planning document apply to all municipalities in the region. The province said it is powerless to do so, given new legislation enacted last December.

"The short answer is that under Bill 28, the provincial government cannot legislate the CMP without the voluntary request of all the affected municipalities," Emily Woods, press secretary to Acting Minister of Municipal Affairs Greg Weadick, told Metro in an email.

That, however, stands in stark contrast to Nenshi's interpretation of a March 13 letter from Ken Hughes, who was minister of municipal affairs at the time but has since stepped down.

Nenshi said Hughes' reference in that letter to a "collective desire" for "enshrining the CMP in legislation" indicates the province has an interest in mandating that all regional municipalities abide by the plan, whether they sign it or not.

"It's like the Canadian constitution applies to Quebec although they never signed it," Nenshi said.

But Coun. Andre Chabot had a different view of the province's position.

"I was led to believe recently, in a discussion with somebody directly involved with the minister, that this would only apply to those who signed on to it," he told the mayor during Monday's council meeting.

"That's impossible," Nenshi replied. "They may need yet more education on what a land development plan is."

The mayor went on to say that the plan is useless without full regional inclusion and Calgary won't participate in that case.

"Obviously, if it doesn't apply to the counties, then there's no point," he said. "I'm not signing it."

Police seek public's help in chapel fire investigation

No tips yet. Police are urging people with info to come forward

KEN VAN DE WALLE
calgary@metronews.ca

Police say the damage to the chapel at Union Cemetery is estimated at $100,000 following a fire in March. COURTESY CALGARY POLICE SERVICE

Fire that resulted in $100,000 damage to a chapel at a major Calgary cemetery is believed to be an act of arson and police are seeking public help in locating suspects.

Just after 3:30 p.m. on March 29, emergency responders were called to the Union Cemetery because of a report of smoke inside a chapel.

Once the fire was extinguished, officials discovered graffiti throughout the interior of the building.

"There are no suspects at this point, no definitive suspects," said Det. Brad Weinberger.

The chapel was closed to the public at the time of the incident.

"It was somewhat empty, it was used as a resource for equipment for staff on site here," Weinberger said. "It wasn't an active church setting, but it's a storage facility."

Given that it's been more than a month since the incident, police wanted to renew public attention in an effort to find suspects.

"We haven't received any tips at this point," Weinberger said, adding police believe there are members of the public who may have information but have not come forward.

"On Saturday afternoon (the day of the incident) I believe there were other people on site here," he said. "There was at least one or two family gatherings on site here, so somebody maybe out there saw something that I'm not aware of."

Police ask anyone with information to contact them at 403-266-1234 or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

Police investigate alleged child abduction attempt

Police say they received reports of an alleged attempted child abduction in Calgary's northeast Sunday and investigators are looking for additional information.

Around 8:40 p.m., a 10-year-old girl was sitting in front of her home in the 5700 block of 18 Avenue N.E. when she was allegedly grabbed on the arm by a man, according to police. The young girl told investigators that the man was driving a black truck and stopped in front of her home before approaching her.

Cops say she screamed and the man fled the scene.

The suspect is described as Caucasian, between 30 to 40 years old. He's believed to be between 180 to 200 pounds and stands between five-foot-five and five-foot-eight. At the time of the incident, the suspect was wearing a white V-neck T-shirt and blue jeans. The truck is described as a black pickup and it may have damage to the front passenger side.

As of Monday morning, investigators were canvassing the area in hopes of finding witnesses or anyone who may have information about the suspect. Those with information are asked to call Crime Stoppers anonymously at 1-800-222-8477. METRO

Collision. Man suffers serious injuries after car crash on Crowchild Trail

Investigators were on scene Monday morning following a single-vehicle collision that sent one man to hospital in life-threatening condition.

According to police, a 1994 dark-blue Toyota Corolla was travelling northbound on Crowchild Trail over Bow Trail around 6 a.m. when the vehicle lost control and hit the median.

Det. Dale Seddon with the Calgary Police Service said the driver was not wearing a seat belt and was ejected from the vehicle. Speed and alcohol are being investigated, according to a police release; however, Seddon said it's much too early to tell what happened.

"There's witnesses that have to be able to help us out with what they saw," he said.

'Significant lacerations'

Boy hospitalized after dog attack

A young boy was taken to hospital Monday afternoon after being injured by a dog.

EMS spokesperson Adam Loria said paramedics were called to a home on Ash Crescent S.E. around 3:15 p.m.

Loria said a young boy, roughly preschool age, was taken to the Alberta Children's Hospital in non-life-threatening condition but did suffer some serious wounds, including "significant lacerations to his upper torso as a result of a dog bite, or dog bites."

Ken Hughes quits race to back Jim Prentice

Alberta PC leadership. Jim Prentice has yet to announce his candidacy

Former Alberta cabinet minister Ken Hughes quit the race Monday to become the next leader of the governing Progressive Conservatives, saying he will now support soon-to-be-announced candidate Jim Prentice.

Hughes told reporters last week that he was in the race to the end, but now says it's clear that there is a "strong consensus" forming within the party around Prentice and that he is the best choice.

"More importantly, the province needs the kind of strong leadership that Jim Prentice can provide," said Hughes.

His departure leaves former transportation minister Ric McIver as the only formally declared candidate.

Prentice, a former Calgary MP and federal cabinet minister, is expected to announce his intentions in the coming days.

Late Sunday, Justice Minister Jonathan Denis announced he will not run and will support Prentice.

Finance Minister Doug Horner and Energy Minister Diana McQueen announced last week they won't run either but will support Prentice.

Jobs Minister Thomas Lukaszuk said Monday he is still weighing his options and called it "unfortunate" that Hughes dropped out.

"He was offering a legitimate choice, and we knew what he stood for and we knew what his platform was, and he had a well-known track record on provincial issues and policies," he said.

He said a healthy leadership race strengthens a party.

Neighbour Day. One year after flood, Calgary asks residents to celebrate it

In commemoration of the spirit of community that emerged in the wake of the 2013 flood, the City of Calgary is encouraging residents to get together and celebrate during the inaugural "Neighbour Day" on June 21.

"I think the best way for us to remember the incredible outpouring of citizenship after the flood is for us to be together with our neighbours," Mayor Naheed Nenshi said Monday. "So I'm encouraging Calgarians, on June 21, to get to know your neighbours."

The City of Calgary has also prepared a website — calgary.ca/neighbourday — that has ideas and tools to help organize an event.

Hackers and health pros unite for innovation

Hacking Health has been held before in several other cities, including Toronto in November 2013. COURTESY HACKING HEALTH

Partnership. W21C, Startup Calgary and Innovate Calgary bring Hacking Health to Cowtown.

Health-care professionals with a problem and developers with a solution will come together next month for Calgary's first Hacking Health.

The three-day event, which is being held at the University of Calgary from June 13-15, will bring together those in the medical field with tech experts in hopes of creating innovative tools for the future of health care.

"You have these highly skilled, educated professionals working in the (health care) system day-to-day and they don't have the time or necessarily the expertise or the connections in order to make these technological solutions," said Julia MacGregor with W21C, a non-profit health research initiative based at the U of C.

MacGregor explained those in health care will have one minute to pitch their ideas to a group of tech experts who will then be able to choose which project they want to work on and from there, the teams have 48 hours to create a prototype.

"We've definitely got a lot of health-care professionals coming forward that are really excited about it," said MacGregor.

Lac-Mégantic. Quebec town plans to rebuild the Musi-Café, destroyed in 2013’s train disaster, as partly a gathering place, partly a memorial

Time has passed in Lac-Mégantic, but the anxiety has not.

Ten months after the train disaster that killed 47 in the Quebec town, residents should be gearing up for a bustling tourist season.

Instead, they are still finding their feet after the tragedy and hoping that a construction project begun last week will return some spirit to a town that has known only ghosts since July 6, 2013, when a runaway train loaded with crude oil jumped the tracks and wiped out a swath of the downtown.

The project that is being unveiled Tuesday — the reconstruction of the Musi-Café, a popular local bar — is both emotional and practical.

Practical because the destruction of the rallying point for local revellers, karaoke singers and visiting musical acts has left Lac-Mégantic without a nightlife or place to celebrate moments of joy.

It is charged with emotion because the bar was where about 30 of the 47 victims were enjoying drinks, music and friends when the train flipped, caught fire and exploded.

Just a few things were recovered: a beer sign, a few beer kegs, a drink shaker and a patio umbrella. But the most touching item bar owner Yannick Gagné now has in his possession is the charred steel box that held cash, coins, keys and deposit slips signed by staff, three of whom died that night.

It was thought to have been incinerated, but was discovered two months ago in debris around the town’s former library, down the street from the Musi-Café’s former site.

“They put it aside and when they opened it three weeks or one month later, they realized there was too much money for it to belong to the library and there were special objects inside like keys, because I always kept the keys inside,” Gagné told Torstar News Service on Monday.

These items will make up part of a memorial that will adorn the new bar when it opens in August or September. It will honour all the townsfolk who died that morning, but especially the many whose last moments were inside the bar.

The new Musi-Café will be just 6,000 square feet of commercial space located at the end of Lac-Mégantic’s relocated downtown strip, but it is nevertheless an “overwhelming project,” said Marc Bovet, head of Bone Structure, the Quebec firm handling the construction.

“It’s not just a building anymore,” he said. “It’s a spirit.

“Yannick has been designated, whether he wanted it or not ... as being the leader of rebuilding this community, and it doesn’t all come with bricks and mortar.”

Charges filed

The Crown prosecutor’s office in Quebec says three people and a train company will face criminal negligence charges stemming from the disaster.

- 47 counts of criminal negligence have been filed against Thomas Harding, Jean Demaitre and Richard Labrie as well as the Montreal, Maine and Atlantic Railway Ltd.

Musi-Café owner Yannick Gagné is rebuilding his popular bar in Lac-Mégantic 10 months after the deadly train explosion. On display will be the cash box containing money, keys and papers signed by a number of deceased employees that was recovered in mid-April from the site of the crash. COURTESY JACQUES BOSTIE

Human rights crisis.
UN official slams Canada’s record on First Nations

A UN rapporteur is at a loss to explain how a prosperous and sophisticated country like Canada has come to have on its hands a First Nations human-rights problem that has reached “crisis proportions.”

James Anaya’s report picks a fight with the federal government on several fronts — education, energy projects on reserves and missing or murdered aboriginal women, to name a few — and is sure to amplify tensions between Canada’s First Nations and a federal government they so thoroughly distrust.

“It is difficult to reconcile Canada’s well-developed legal framework and general prosperity with the human-rights problems faced by indigenous peoples in Canada that have reached crisis proportions in many respects,” writes Anaya, the UN’s special rapporteur on indigenous rights.

Aboriginal Affairs Minister Bernard Valcourt acknowledged more needs to be done, but highlighted steps the government has taken to give First Nations access to housing, education and matrimonial rights.

“Our government is proud of the effective and incremental steps taken in partnership with aboriginal communities. We are committed to continuing to work with our partners to make significant progress in improving the lives of aboriginal people in Canada,” Valcourt said in a statement.

Wurst-case scenario for some Russian fans

Drag queen. European opinion divided after Austrian victory at music competition

It's the beard that divided a continent. The victory of whiskered drag queen Conchita Wurst in the Eurovision Song Contest had celebrities from Nigella Lawson to Russell Brand posting bearded selfies on the Internet in tribute — and Russian men snapping clean-shaven pictures in protest.

For millions of viewers, the annual Eurovision show is a cheesy music competition renowned for its camp, kitsch and electro beats. But the nation-based contest is also a potent mix of patriotism and politics in bubblegum wrapping.

Wurst's win has exposed a divide between Europe's progressives and conservatives that British tabloid The Sun cheekily described Monday as the "Furred World War."

The statuesque brunette with the soaring voice of a diva and a full dark beard called her first-place finish in Saturday's contest a victory for tolerance and respect.

But Russian Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin tweeted that Eurovision had shown the true face of European integration: "a bearded girl." On social media, a variety of Russian men posted shaving-foam selfies with slogans such as "Get shaved, don't be like a woman!"

Pro-Kremlin legislator Olga Batalina — deputy head of the family and maternity issues committee of the lower house of Russia's parliament — said Wurst's victory showed "it's not enough to have a talent and a good voice to win Eurovision; you also need to reject your nature, identity and traditions."

That may sound like a lot of rhetoric over a talent show but Eurovision has always been more than a singing contest. Founded in 1956, the competition pits European nations against one another in pursuit of pop music glory.

But it is more generally loved, and mocked, for its parade of cheesy tunes from quirky performers. The live telecast is watched by some 180 million people and has a particularly strong gay following. It also faces perennial accusations of regional block-voting and geopolitical games.

East Ukraine. Insurgents declare independence

Pro-Moscow insurgents in eastern Ukraine declared independence Monday and sought to join Russia, undermining Ukraine's May 25 presidential election, strengthening the Kremlin's hand and putting pressure on Kyiv to hold talks with the separatists.

Russia signalled it has no intention of subsuming eastern Ukraine the way it annexed Crimea in March. Instead, Moscow is pushing to include eastern regions in negotiations on Ukraine's future — suggesting that Russia prefers a political, not military, solution to its worst standoff with the West since the Cold War.

Acting Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk pledged Monday to hold talks with those in Ukraine's east. But he gave no specifics and did not address the declarations of independence by the Donetsk and Luhansk regions.

The interim government in Kyiv had been hoping the presidential vote would unify the country behind a new, democratically chosen leadership.

Boko Haram leader wants prisoner swap

Nigeria. Schoolgirls won't be released until detained fighters are freed: Extremist

A Nigerian Islamic extremist leader says nearly 300 abducted schoolgirls will not be seen again until the government frees his detained fighters.

A new video from Nigeria's Boko Haram terrorist network received Monday purports to show some of the girls and young women chanting Quranic verses in Arabic. The barefoot girls look frightened and sit huddled together wearing grey Muslim veils. Some Christians among them say they have converted to Islam.

It is the first video evidence of the girls and young women since more than 300 were kidnapped from a northeastern school on April 15.

"I swear to almighty Allah you will not see them again until you release our people that you have captured," leader Abubakar Shekau says as he cradles an assault rifle in the video.

It is not known how many suspected Boko Haram members are detained by security forces. Hundreds were killed by soldiers last month when Shekau's fighters stormed the military's main northeastern barracks in Maiduguri city, the birthplace of Boko Haram.

Fifty-three schoolgirls have escaped by themselves and 276 are missing, police say. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ads. Frozen food makers hope to warm consumers up to products with campaign

Shoppers are giving frozen food the cold shoulder these days. DAVID MCNEW/GETTY IMAGES

Frozen food makers plan to launch their first national TV ad in defence of their products on Tuesday as the category fights to boost slipping sales.

The ad will include the tag line "Frozen: How Fresh Stays Fresh" and is intended to address negative misconceptions people have about frozen foods.

It's part of a marketing campaign being funded by the American Frozen Food Institute, an industry group that represents companies including Nestle, which makes Hot Pockets and Lean Cuisine, and ConAgra, which makes Healthy Choice and Marie Callender's.

The push comes as frozen food sales have been hurt by a move toward food people feel are fresh or natural. Although frozen vegetables are often touted as being just as wholesome as their fresh counterparts, frozen meals and snacks are widely seen as being full of sodium and preservatives, or lacking in the taste department.

Between 2009 and last year, U.S. sales of frozen meals are down 3 per cent at $8.92 billion US, according to Euromonitor International. And this year, the market researcher is forecasting a decline of an additional 2 per cent.

The Associated Press reported on the American Frozen Food Institute's plans for the campaign last month.

In a phone interview on Monday, Kraig Naasz, president of the American Frozen Food Institute, disclosed that the group plans to invest as much as $90 million in the campaign over three years.

"This is a long-term strategy. The primary purpose is to enter into a dialogue with consumers," he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Prosthetic hands get a modern update

DEKA Arm System. The latest twist on the 1912 invention lets amputees open envelopes, pick up eggs

Modern life is quickly becoming stranger, and for amputees, better than science fiction.

Take the revolutionary new prosthetic limb that looks, and is, completely cutting edge.

The limb is called the DEKA Arm System — and it was developed in New Hampshire by serial inventor/genius Dean Kamen and his team. The thing even has fingernails.

Technology for prosthetic hands hasn't had too many radical advances. Until now, most have been variations on the theme of the 1912 invention of the clasping hook prosthetic.

The DEKA represents a mind-boggling advancement.

Wireless sensors placed under the foot of the user allow them to control six different grips. And that means, as you'll see in the demonstration (scan the Metro AR photo to see), that a user with one hand can now perform previously difficult tasks like opening an envelope.

The impetus for the invention was a DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) initiative called The Revolutionizing Prosthetics Program. Its goal is "so service members with arm loss may one day have the option of choosing to return to duty. Additionally, the dexterous hand capabilities developed under the program have already been applied to small robotic systems used in manipulating unexploded ordnance, thus keeping soldiers out of situations that have led to limb loss."

The new system has just been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, meaning that it can be manufactured, sold — and start being of use to amputees. It's powerful enough to hold a hand drill, while sensitive enough to allow a user to pick up items as delicate as eggs.

Though a huge improvement from previous prosthetics, the system won't replace the complexity and sensitivity of a human hand.

But remember — this is just the first generation. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

In this video screenshot, Fred Downs shows how he can use different grips on the DEKA Arm System to open and handle mail. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the system for commercialization last week. SCREENGRAB

Want seasoning with that?

McDonald's in the U.S. has imported a popular concept from its franchise cousins in Asia that will allow customers to punch up their fries with seasonings.

After debuting in Hong Kong in 2005, the first Shakin' Flavor Fries has hit restaurants in Northern California. Customers can season their fries with flavours like garlic parmesan, spicy buffalo or zesty ranch. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ME TARZAN, YOU BREADWINNER

SHE SAYS
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

Earlier this month, Fox News hosted a discussion about whether it's problematic for a woman to make more money than her husband. Apparently, segment host Clayton Morris believes female breadwinners are causing serious martial issues among heterosexual couples.

"Isn't there some sort of biological, innate need for men to be the caveman?" he asked a panel of guests.

A genuinely concerned Morris then went on to argue that men should be responsible for "going out and bringing home the dinner" and it is emasculating for a husband to be out-earned by his wife.

I understand that no one has ever accused the talking heads at Fox of being overly feminist, but this news segment seemed particularly chauvinistic, even for them.

It's hard to believe that people are still clinging to these outdated gender roles. Hosting a televised debate about how "Alpha women" are undermining their husbands and contributing to some sort of imagined societal breakdown seems like something that might have happened in 1954, not 2014.

Are we really supposed to believe that modern men are so fragile and insecure? A 2013 Pew Research Study found that almost a quarter of married mothers in the U.S. earn more than their husbands, which means there must be a lot of bruised male egos out there, according to Morris's caveman logic.

In my opinion, women who are the primary income earners in a relationship are about as "problematic" as husbands who change diapers or do the laundry.

Children are incredibly draining on all of your resources — time, energy and definitely money — and nobody should be criticized for contributing to the family finances.

A man's self-esteem might be closely linked to his career, but so is mine.

The women I know are far more likely to find self-fulfillment by succeeding in a lucrative career than perfecting their ability to bake a cake or be a "good wife" in the traditional, Fox News kind of way.

Raising a family is a joint effort. Married partners are playing on the same team, and men and women shouldn't be competing over their paycheques.

There are so many different types of households, and expecting the partner with the most testosterone to fulfil the role of "provider" at all times is a completely archaic notion.

Female breadwinners aren't an issue; sexist news anchors who broadcast their patriarchal opinions and disapprove of women with high-paying jobs are the real problem in this scenario.

Men should be proud to be coupled up with a successful partner, not worrying about how their wife's salary impacts their own masculine identity.

WE ACT:
CANADA DOES GOOD

Stories from hospital hallways

Each month, we profile a Canadian who's up to a whole lot of good. Here's one we'd like you to meet:

Who: Jackie Kinder, community volunteer with Childcan, London.
What: Fundraising and organizing community events to help support the families of young people diagnosed with cancer.
Why: To provide the families with the financial and community support they need to focus on their children.

Jackie met 14-year-old Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain-tumour survivor, when she began volunteering with Childcan. "She's my hero," says Jackie. "Knowing what she went through and knowing that through it all she was so brave, so concerned with helping other children, that's what hooked me." Since then, Jackie has taken a leading role fundraising for Childcan, participating in the Inside Ride cycling event and the National Day of Action for kids with cancer at the CN Tower.

Jackie Kinder, right, with Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain tumour survivor. CONTRIBUTED

What motivated you to get involved with families dealing with childhood cancer?
"You don't leave a child alone in the hospital — you're there for the long haul, and it's incredibly demanding on the family. When families come into the hospital, Childcan has people there right away to offer support. We bring them into the Childcan family, and I fundraise to help with gas, cafeteria vouchers, parking and credit-card bills. The financial hardships are major — but help is always there."

You've spent your life working with young people, first as a teacher and now as a volunteer. What advice do you have for them?
"Take the time to find and develop your passion for a cause. I've met some wonderful volunteers, and they are all happier for the work they do. They've learned that happiness doesn't mean all that you own — it's about giving back to other people. It's something I learned from Stephanie: it's the feeling you get doing something worthwhile for other people in your community that keeps us going."

Every year, the city of Hamburg celebrates its harbour's birthday with a massive bash along the Elbe. Drawing more than one million people, the harbour party features vessel parades, something called a tugboat ballet and the much more humble-sounding dragon boat race.

But this is a party, after all. And what party is complete without music? Enter the enormous cruise ship MSC Magnifica — launched from this very harbour in 2010 — and its bone-rattling, horn-fired rendition of Seven Nation Army.

Indie musical landscape. Singer Annie Clark comes into her own, creating a live show unlike any other St. Vincent concert

Just because St. Vincent's summer itinerary is packed with more than a dozen festival dates on four continents doesn't mean that Annie Clark is scaling back the theatrics of the St. Vincent concert experience.

The singer and guitarist will still force herself down a giant set of pink stairs, writhe around against a storm of strobe lights and eventually command the procession, purposefully poised like a cross, from an oversized pink throne.

"We've worked really hard on this strange fever dream of a show, bringing it to life," says Clark, "so it's important that people get the whole experience, even if it's at a festival."

That "strange fever dream of a show," along with the self-titled fifth St. Vincent album, may be the most definitive statement from any artist this year. From Clark's fat guitar leads to her strange and simple lyrics — any of which can Wbe pulled out to illustrate what St. Vincent is all about in 2014 — it feels like the artist has truly discovered her identity.

"I'll always be evolving and be restless and wanting to move violently into the future," says Clark of arriving at something that could be considered iconic, "but I was reading Miles Davis's autobiography and it was saying how the hardest thing about being a musician is to sound like yourself. I can hear one note of Miles or Coltrane and know that it's them and it's the world that they have painstakingly created to be unmistakable. I just thought that this record for me was something where I had successfully created a landscape that was my own."

This landscape includes Clark's stylized lavender/gray old lady hair, of which she says: "Everyone is really obsessed with being young and youth culture and this sort of erroneous idea that things are the best when you are young, and I am young, but I wanted to see what it would look like to go in the opposite direction." And this landscape also includes conscious choreography in the live show, the likes of which hasn't been seen on a St. Vincent tour before. Clark says she was inspired by doing an album and tour with David Byrne, whose live show included an eight-piece brass band moving around the stage and creating what Clark says was "this whole other level of drama and whimsy and symbolic subconscious meaning that the audience can pick up on."

"I wanted to create a real experience for people, especially in this day and age where we are kind of obsessed with capturing moments at the expense of living them," she says. "I wanted to encourage people as much as possible to be present and be so engrossed in the show that they are not tempted to check their text messages."

St. Vincent will be the musical guest on the season finale of Saturday Night Live this weekend.

Her

Director. Spike Jonze

Stars. Joaquin Phoenix, Scarlett Johansson

Most sci-fi films make a human/machine love connection seem perverse or at least far out, yet Spike Jonze's Her treats it as a mild novelty.

Set about five years in the future in techno-fabulous L.A., it's nominally a simple sci-fi romance of a man, played by Joaquin Phoenix, falling in love with a machine, voiced by Scarlett Johansson.

There's much more going on than this, of course, as you'd expect from the director who brought us the layered head-spinners Being John Malkovich, Adaptation and Where the Wild Things Are. The film's subliminal message is that the human touch is in danger of being replaced with an "on" switch.

Phoenix and Johansson make for a completely convincing couple. Jonzesidesteps sniggers, shivers and convention, putting in plot twiststhat are at once shocking and completely logical.

He's really interested in the difficulty of making and maintaining emotional and intellectual ties, no matter whether the heart is made of flesh or silicon.

Extras include several making-of featurettes.

Community doesn't make the cut for a sixth season

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Community's cast of comedians. HANDOUT

The drama behind the scenes on beleaguered NBC sitcom Community was always nearly as compelling as the jokes onscreen. Perennially low-rated, Community faced cancellation every year for its five seasons. Now the scrappy little show that could finally can't: NBC gave it the axe last week.

The show's obsessive fans won't give up at such a minor setback, however. Fans have already begun petitioning production company Sony to shop Community to other networks.

But the plan won't work unless the most important fan of all, creator/showrunner Dan Harmon, is onboard, and he sounds decidedly unenthused.

"[W]hen Sony called me on Friday with the news, there was brief discussion at the end of the call about the concept of the show living elsewhere, and I was definitely in the 'eh' column," he writes on his blog.

"For a million reasons, some selfish, some creative, one logistic, five sexual, three racist (in a good way) and, oddly, nine isometric."

Ben's gambling Garners negative attention from Jennifer

Ben Affleck is developing quite a reputation in Las Vegas, with several casinos accusing the Argo star of card counting — and his wife, Jennifer Garner, is less than thrilled, according to Star magazine. "Jen demanded to go to Vegas with Ben because she doesn't trust him, and he felt like he had no choice but to take her," a source says of the couple's visit last month that didn't end well for Affleck. "But after their dinners there each night, she would go back to their suite while Ben would stay out all night playing cards, betting thousands of dollars at a time. It makes Jen so mad, but once Ben starts gambling he can't stop." Until the casino intervenes, at least. And the source claims that when Affleck was busted by the Hard Rock Hotel & Casino, Garner was by his side: "She looked totally bored and annoyed," the source says.

Solange Knowles GETTY IMAGES

She may be young, but she's ready to throw down

In an exclusive video from TMZ.com, you can see Beyoncé's sister, Solange Knowles, viciously attacking Jay-Z in an elevator after the Met Ball. A man who appears to be Jay Z's bodyguard holds the swinging and kicking Knowles back, but she makes contact with the Hova at least three times. For her part, Beyoncé just kind of stands there.

The video was taken by a surveillance camera in the elevator of the Standard Hotel after the big gala on May 4th during an after party. As TMZ.com points out, the bodyguard stops the elevator at one point, probably in hopes of keeping this private affair private.

Too late.

Looks can be deceiving — even when it comes to boredom

Why do we get bored?
One professor weighs in

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News in New York City

Researchers believe there are five types of boredom. ISTOCK

You might think it's your fault you're dozing off in a classroom or office, but that's not always the case.

There are clear categories of boredom triggered by one's environment, says pioneering researcher Dr. Thomas Goetz from the University of Konstanz in Germany (see sidebar).

What is the most common misconception about boredom?
It's important to recognize the different types, and clearly define the differences.

You say apathetic boredom is the worst — how bad can it get?
The problem is that it makes every experience negative and the potential for arousal is low. You can't do anything against this state and it can become a big problem related to depression.

What puts us at risk?
Some people tend to a specific state but only to a small degree; each experience is based on situations. It's important that people recognize the forms. Often the problem is a lack of freedom, such as at school. Teachers should be aware and try to find individualized methods that give students choice.

Is there a risk that teaching boredom could cause more boredom?
There is an argument from anxiety research that awareness increases the problem, but in this case it is about knowing and realizing, and this goes hand in hand with resolving it.

What follow-up research is needed?
We didn't measure the effects. We need diagnostic instruments to show the experiences of boredom.

Types of boredom

Here are the various categories.

- Indifferent boredom. A relaxing, possibly positive type – "a general indifference to, and withdrawal from, the external world."
- Calibrating boredom. Wandering thoughts — "general openness to behaviours aimed at changing the situation."
- Searching boredom. "Actively seeking out specific ways of minimizing feelings of boredom."
- Reactant boredom. Causes sufferers "to leave the boredom-inducing situation and avoid those responsible for this situation (e.g., teachers)."
- Apathetic boredom. Impossible to break from this mode – "dangerous, similar to depression."

Talking about ovarian cancer

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday
Editor-in-chief
Best Health Magazine

Pelvic or abdominal pain that lasts more than three weeks could be a symptom of ovarian cancer. ISTOCK

Raising awareness about ovarian cancer is crucial: 2,600 women are diagnosed with ovarian cancer in Canada each year. More than half will die. Plus, no effective screening test exists (many women believe the Pap test can detect this disease, but it can't), and the symptoms are hard to detect.

Melissa Greer writes about the issue in the current issue of Best Health magazine — Canada's healthy lifestyle magazine for women.

Women with the BRCA 1 or BRCA 2 gene mutation, who have a high risk of ovarian cancer, can reduce their risk of death before age 70 by 77 per cent if they have their ovaries removed. The research, published online in February in the Journal of Clinical Oncology, suggests that women with BRCA 1 who have this procedure by age 35 show the greatest benefit — reducing their risk of ovarian, Fallopian tube or peritoneal cancer by 80 per cent.

Ovarian Cancer Canada is holding fundraising events across Canada this year called Love Her (the next one is in Vancouver on May 28). At the Toronto event a couple of months ago, the lead author of the study cited above — the world-renowned Dr. Steven Narod of Women's College Research Institute in Toronto — shared the exciting news.

As national magazine partner to Love Her, Best Health was at the event to hear a moving speech by Bailey Urquhart, a 25-year-old from Hamilton, Ont., who was diagnosed with stage III ovarian cancer about a year ago. She had a complete hysterectomy (including removal of her ovaries) and underwent chemotherapy.

"You know your body best, and it's important to be your own advocate," Urquhart told the audience. She also reinforced the importance of being aware of the symptoms (including pelvic or abdominal pain that lasts longer than three weeks). In her case, her symptoms were overlooked by doctors time and time again.

For more information about the signs and symptoms of ovarian cancer, go to love-her.ca and ovariancanada.org.

Travis Stork. Doc shares health tips

Dr. Travis Stork is a practising emergency medicine physician and an Emmy-nominated host of The Doctors. These are his top health tips.

• Do neurobics. Stimulate your mind and enhance your brain's performance by changing up your regular routine. Tie your shoes with your eyes closed, take up a new hobby.

• Visit your doctor once a year and your dentist twice a year for routine check-ups; regular check-ups with your doctor and dentist can help uncover issues earlier.

• Oral health is an important part of your overall health, so it's important to practise a daily oral care routine which includes flossing, brushing for two full minutes twice a day, and rinsing. Only 44 per cent of Canadian adults claim to follow this oral care routine regularly, and not surprisingly more than half of Canadians suffer from gingivitis.

• Catch some zzz's. Try to get seven to eight hours of sleep a night. Establish a routine and get in sync with your body's rhythm. Here's a good test: If you're getting up without an alarm in the morning, you're most likely getting enough sleep and have good sleep hygiene.

Acupuncture is based on the theory that essential life energy, called Qi, flows through the body along channels called meridians. Each meridian is connected to a specific internal organ. When the flow of Qi is blocked or out of balance, illness or pain results. Needling specific acupoint combinations which are calculated according to the patient's condition can not only relieve pain but amplify and redistribute energy in the body, eliminating disease.

This recipe serves six. COURTESY THERESA ALBERT

For an interesting presentation, place salad greens in mason jars and drizzle dressing. Or serve as salad topped with chops.

1. In large shallow dish, whisk together vinegar, mustard, soy sauce, rosemary, oil and garlic. Spoon half into a separate bowl and thin with water to make dressing.

2. Add lamb chop in single layer, turning to coat well. Cover and marinate on counter for 10-20 minutes or up to 24 hours covered in fridge, turning occasionally.

3. Discarding marinade, place chops on greased grill over medium-high heat; cook for about 5 minutes per side for medium rare or to desired doneness. Let rest or place into jars as below immediately to keep moist and warm.

4. For an interesting presentation, place salad greens in mason jars and drizzle dressing. Or, serve as salad topped with chops.

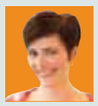
Mary had a little lamb



NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCP
myfriendinfood.com

Mary had a little lamb, because the meat is moist and rich and satisfying, and a little lamb is all you need. Bahaha. OK, that's enough.

Delicious lamb is raised in Canada and is generally a local, grass-fed food.

That said, if you don't check the label, you are more than likely enjoying an imported product from New Zealand.

Lamb leg or rump can be a little higher in fat and calories but it has all of the benefits of other animal meats like protein, B12 and zinc.

Lamb chops are generally a quick-cooking, leaner option and a nice change.

There is a slightly gamey flavour to lamb that can be an acquired taste but chops are generally milder. For newbies, sweet flavours like mint or raspberry are great compliments to minimize the grassiness.

The trick for cooking lamb chops is to be sure to preheat the grill to a very high heat but to only cook each chop for three or four minutes per side.

The protein is delicate and the meat is thin, so chops don't need much attention to be tender and delicious.

Let the chops rest for a few minutes before serving so that all of the juices remain within the meat.

Environment. More golf courses are embracing initiatives for wildlife and habitat management

A total of 65 Canadian courses are certified members of the Audubon Co-operative Sanctuary System, with hundreds more working towards certification. SHUTTERSTOCK

BRIAN KENDALL
For Metro

Once ranked alongside the razing of rainforests as an ecologically hostile activity, golf has embraced the green movement with the zeal of the converted.

A total of 65 Canadian courses are fully certified members of the Audubon Co-operative Sanctuary System, with hundreds more working towards certification. The international program sets targets in a variety of areas, from wildlife and habitat management to water conservation and quality control.

And then there are the courses that go even further by making their green initiatives all part of the fun and attraction of playing them.

Dean Piller, the superintendent at Victoria's Cordova Bay Golf Course, conducts birdwatching tours twice a year, having worked hard to attract an astonishing variety of land and sea birds to the property.

Nesting boxes were strategically placed around the course, as well as feeders to help birds survive the winter at a course open year-round. From about 60 different bird species routinely seen at Cordova Bay several years ago, the count has now risen to more than 70, from cormorants and blue herons to barn swallows and bald eagles.

At Stewart Creek Golf and Country Club, a Rocky Mountain layout in the environmentally sensitive Bow Valley near Canmore, Alta., wildlife corridors are incorporated into the course routing, as well as native grasses to provide forage for migrating animals. Golfers thrill to watching bear, elk and other wildlife travel through the course.

But perhaps the most original initiative is found at Manitoba's Clear Lake Golf Course in Riding Mountain National Park, where there is often a strong, and environmentally beneficial, whiff of french fries in the air.

The smell is expelled by the exhausts of six maintenance machines rigged to run on used cooking oil gathered from nearby restaurants. As much as 10,000 litres of an otherwise useless waste product is recycled this way each year.

"The only downside is that golfers are reporting a constant craving for fast food," course superintendent Greg Holden said jokingly.

Make those putts count

Annika Sorenstam says you should be in charge on the greens when you are lining up short putts. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

It's almost impossible to overstate the importance of making short putts. Consistently missing three- and four-footers will quickly destroy your confidence and ruin your scores.

No less an authority than Annika Sorenstam believes that boldness is the key.

"Be in charge," she said. "A great way to practise making short putts is to place a tee at the back of the cup and hit toward it with conviction. Make a decision and boom — drop the putt."

Top instructor David Leadbetter suggests choking down on the putter for better control. Grip the club lightly, make a short stroke and accelerate through impact.

Just as crucial is resisting the temptation to look up immediately after you have hit the ball. This will ensure that you complete your stroke and keep the putter's face square to the target line.

"Wait for the rattle when the ball drops into the cup," Sam Snead liked to say. "It's the sweetest sound in golf."

Habs blank Bruins to force Game 7

NHL playoffs. Canadiens use 1-2 punch of Pacioretty and Price to send series back to Boston

Game 6

Canadiens	Bruins

Max Pacioretty broke out of a scoring slump with a goal and an assist in the second period and Carey Price made 26 saves as the Montreal Canadiens downed the Boston Bruins 4-0 to force a seventh game in their Eastern Conference semifinal series on Monday night.

The series is tied 3-3 going into Game 7 on Wednesday night in Boston.

Pacioretty, who had only one assist in the first five games, scored and set up Thomas Vanek's goal in the second period. Lars Eller scored in the first for Montreal and Vanek added his second of the game into an empty net with 3:56 left in regulation time.

Rookie Nathan Beaulieu, the Canadiens' 2011 first-round draft pick who was given a surprise start by coach Michel Therrien, picked up an assist in his first NHL playoff game and was plus-2.

The Canadiens repeated the scenario of their 2011 first-round series against the Bruins, winning at home to force a Game 7. That year, they lost the decisive game in overtime.

Despite having the best of the play in the opening 20 minutes, the Canadiens needed a freak play for the only goal.

Kevan Miller lost the puck off his stick behind the Boston net and then inadvertently tripped goalie Tuukka Rask as he tried to smother it, leaving Eller free to score unassisted 2:11 into the game.

Premier League

City still playing in United's shadow

Manchester City has deposed its neighbour as Premier League champions for the second time in three years, but is not close to usurping United's global supremacy — both as a football club and as a brand.

Even Premier League officials marked the end of the season by assuring United's owners of the team's enduring power.

"They are the world's largest football club in my view with huge resources, with huge determination and a fantastic fan base," league chief executive Richard Scudamore told Sky Sports television. "Of course their time will come again."

Price's offensive tweets 'outrage' Stampeders

'Repugnant.' CFL club slams its wide receiver for tasteless comments over NFL draft pick Michael Sam

The Calgary Stampeders say they are "outraged by the offensive comments" posted on wide receiver Maurice Price's Twitter account that appeared to disparage the sexual orientation of NFL draft pick Michael Sam.

"The comments are repugnant and in no way reflect the organization's views or values," the CFL club said in a statement late Monday. "The matter will now be dealt with internally."

A tweet removed from @MauricePrice17 within an hour of its initial posting said "My faith won't allow me to ACCEPT what took place over the weekend. Sorry. NOT sorry! #AdamandEve #NotAdamandAdam."

"And it's highly disturbing that under the current constitution individuals have been fined for verbalizing their thoughts," another tweet read.

Sam became the first openly gay football player selected in the NFL draft Saturday when the St. Louis Rams drafted him in the seventh round. ESPN and the NFL Network both included video of Sam kissing his male partner in celebration during their coverage of the draft.

Stampeders wide receiver Maurice Price GETTY IMAGES

A later tweet from Price's account, which was also removed, said, "Of course my words get misconstrued. I wish Sam nothing but the best and hope he has a fantastic career. It's nothing personal against him."

The CFL fined Montreal Alouettes wide receiver Arland Bruce in February for urging Sam on social media to "submit fully to God."

Winnipeg Blue Bombers defensive tackle Bryant Turner Jr., was also fined then for a tweet saying "Michael Sam locker-room gonna come with complimentary robes."

In the NFL, Miami Dolphins safety Don Jones was fined an undisclosed amount and will undergo educational training after he tweeted "OMG" and "Horrible" shortly after Sam's name was announced Saturday. The tweets were taken down a short time later.

Jones apologized for his comments and described them as inappropriate. The Dolphins said Jones has been excused from all team activities until he completes training related to his comments.

Former Mississippi basketball player Marshall Henderson also tweeted that he did not agree with ESPN's coverage of Sam at the draft and was going to boycott SportsCenter until the network stopped running the footage.

James' leads Heat past Nets with 49

LeBron James tied his playoff career high with 49 points, Chris Bosh made the tiebreaking three-pointer with 57 seconds left, and the Miami Heat beat the Brooklyn Nets 102-96 on Monday night for a 3-1 lead in the second-round series.

James carried the Heat nearly the entire way until Bosh hit the dagger. Ray Allen followed with four free throws and James finished it off with one more, putting the Heat in position to wrap it up at home Wednesday in Game 5.

James was 16 of 24 from the field and 14 of 19 from the line in matching the 49 points he scored for Cleveland against Orlando in the 2009 Eastern Conference finals. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'This isn't Hollywood.' Glitz won't get Manziel off the Browns' bench

Johnny Manziel has a Heisman Trophy, celebrity friends and fame. At the moment though, he doesn't have a starting job.

Cleveland Browns owner Jimmy Haslam said Monday the Browns told Johnny Football to start acting like a backup quarterback.

Although Manziel has brought a buzz to Cleveland and made the Browns fashionable, Haslam quickly ended any speculation that he'll soar past Brian Hoyer.

"We were very frank with him that 'You're the backup quarterback. This is a hardworking, blue-collar town. This isn't Hollywood,'" Haslam said.
